Marc Robinson: Training Experience

Dr. Marc Robinson is an accomplished trainer and presenter. During his ten years as an academic in Australia, he taught courses at masters and undergraduate levels in public finance and economics and won a number of teaching awards. At that time, he also developed and delivered highly-successful executive training seminars for public sector managers throughout Australia on public budgeting, performance measurement and other public sector financial management issues.

During his subsequent career as an consultant, Marc has developed and presented innumerable training events for civil servants. The majority of these of these have been in-house, recent examples being:

- À three-day course on spending review for the Indonesian Ministry of Finance in Jakarta in November 2025.
- Two four-day workshops on top-down budgeting and related issues delivered to the Ministry of Finance of Peru in December 2024 and January 2025 on behalf of the Government of Switzerland.
- A one-day seminar on public sector performance measurement to the Armenian Ministry of Finance in January 2024.
- A three-day course on evaluation for the Turkish budget office in Ankara in 2022.

Other examples of Dr. Robinson's wealth of training experience include:

- IMF courses delivered in Washington and affiliated centers around the world.
- A suite of performance budgeting courses for delivery by the World Bank-supported "CLEAR" regional centers in Africa, China, Latin America, and South Asia.
- A series of three-day publicly-advertised corses on advanced public sector performance measurement in Dubai and Abu Dhabi.
- A nine-segment video course on performance measurement developed in 2023 to support European Union technical assistance in Africa,
- The performance budgeting component of the Duke University Center for International Development Annual "BUDGET" Program.

Years of executive training experience mean that Marc knows how to present courses that maximize engagement and practical learning. He draws on his extensive consulting experience and technical knowledge to present highly technical topics in the most practical and understandable way.
